GALVESTON HOME & GARDEN SHOW TO BE RESCHEDULED

GALVESTON, TX - Fans of the Galveston Home & Garden Show may be disappointed to learn that the event, scheduled for June, has been cancelled and will be rescheduled. The event rescheduling is due to the effects of the COVID crisis and the historic winter freeze that caused a critical shortage of plants and home repair supplies. A new date will be announced when confirmed.

One of the more popular community events, the Home & Garden Show showcases vendors who offer products and services available in our area for landscaping, home renovations, and an assortment of merchandise for sale. A fun, family outing, speakers make presentations on cooking, gardening and home improvement.

The monumental impact of these experiences has caused a profound economic effect on vendors and materials production, which has led to the short supply of merchandise available to sell at the show.

Baxter Williams, noted rosarian and representative of the Houston Rose Society said, “ I personally lost 100 plants in my once prolific rose garden due to the harsh and ongoing freeze. My supplier cannot get roses right now which makes it impossible to get plants to the show to sell. We look forward to a new date that will give us time to recover. We feel for the gardening enthusiasts who attend the show each year to replenish their gardens. We will be back.”

Mary Jo Naschke, event coordinator, expressed disappointment with having to reschedule yet again. “It has been a horrific year for event planners. First the pandemic dictating no gatherings, the lack of manpower, and now the supply shortages caused by the freeze. When the time is right the Home & Garden Show will be back and better than ever - fully stocked with plants, service providers and materials for home repairs. Our wonderful speakers have agreed to return to the show and we are working on a date that is good for everyone. An announcement will be forthcoming.”
